Dear Mr. Mess.

Having again interviewed Miss Robinson, the International Student, I am confirmed in the opinion that the course of studies which she can most profitably pursue should embrace the two courses in Psychology given in this college as the lecture of Dr. Hodgetts at King's College.

I should explain however that in recommending the latter course as an addition to the ordinary course I have in mind only the academic consideration and the special education requirement of Miss Robertson.

I am not in a position to give any opinion on the question whether the fees for the additional course should be paid by Miss Robertson herself or defrayed from any other source, and I should welcome for my future guidance in similar cases some ruling on the circumstances under which it desirable or undesirable that International Students should be recommended to take course outside the fronches by the College

Yours sincerely
C. A. H. C.
