

THEIR BUSY

ROUND OF PUBLIC DUTIES

Both the Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of York spent a busy day in London yesterday. One call of duty took the Duchess of Kent to Bedford College, where she presented certificates of the Florence Nightingale Foundation, organised in connection with the College of Nursing. You see her handing the award to one of the winners.

The Duchess of York, who attended St. Paul's Cathedral for the Toc H League of Women Helpers service, went on to the Crystal Palace to light new lamps for the branches of the League. She is seen below on right.
