

INTRODUCTORY READING LISTS

The introductory reading list is in three parts:-

Basic Texts: giving an introduction to social policy and various ideas about it including some of the major concepts used.

Historical Texts: providing details of and discussion about the history and development of social policy and the Welfare State.

General Texts: to which you will need constantly to refer throughout the course either because they contain valuable information or because they cover a number of important topics.

HOUSING AND HOUSING POLICIES

A general review of the housing situation will be given, followed by a brief review of housing policies to the second world war and more detailed coverage of policies from then until the present day. Specific issues in housing policy will subsequently be dealt with as follows:

Slum clearance and redevelopment; rehabilitation and improvement;
homelessness; new towns; land policy and inner city policies.

This reading list covers all the above topics. Essential texts are asterisked.

POLICY FORMULATION; IMPLEMENTATION AND EVALUATION

The reading list is in two sections, one on policy formulation and implementation, the second on policy evaluation. The 'essential' reading list has been kept short in both cases, in the hope that this will prove more useful. Much useful material, however, is contained in the 'other reading' list.
