20th January 1928.

Dear Sir,

The Council of Bedford College jointly with the League of Red Cross Societies are arranging a Summer School for those past students of the College known as the International Group, who have taken the Public Health Course or Nurse Administrators Course at Bedford College.

We are expecting students from all over the world and we have great hopes that the Summer School will mean much to them, both as a means of bringing their professional training up to date and as an opportunity of meeting and exchanging views with members of their profession in all parts of the world. It is the first of such summer schools and we want to mark it in some very distinguishing way. We feel that this can be done in no better way than by securing someone of great international importance to open the proceedings.

Will you accept an invitation to open the Summer School on Tuesday afternoon July 17th? The Council of Bedford College any myself as Principal of the College would be enormously honoured to greet you here and we feel that such an opening would secure the success of the undertaking. I trust most sincerely that you will give our request your earnest consideration, and that we may obtain your consent to our proposal.

The opening of the Summer School will immediately follow the ceremony of presentation of certificates to students who have successfully completed their course for the current year.

I am dear Sir,

Yours very truly,

Principal.
